Our 2015 conference '1 Voyage' acknowledges that the journey continues and that we are all on the same voyage of discovering what excellence via continuous improvement looks like.

The voyage's destination is ensuring positive outcomes for all children. The word voyage also acknowledges that this may mean we need to sail in new waters and to be brave enough to reflect critically and change our practice when necessary.

Our voyage is one of ongoing discovery as the evidence about children’s development and learning and the role of families and services continues to build.

Who should attend?
Early childhood teachers, leadership teams, school administrators, researchers, policy-makers, practitioners, government and non-government agencies who advocate for the importance of excellence in early childhood education.

Why Should I ATTEND?
The WA ECEC conference provides a national stage for every teacher who works with young children to reflect, further progress their own personal learning and explore future directions. The Conference will showcase local and global expertise and bring together unprecedented collaborative efforts towards achieving excellence in education.

Professor Rinaldi is a world leader in education for children in the early years. She has been the President of Reggio Children since 2007 and is the first President of the Reggio Children-Loris Malaguzzi Centre Foundation. Carla is also a Professor in the Faculty of Education at the University of Modena and Reggio Emilia.

Professor Rinaldi worked side-by-side with Loris Malaguzzi, the founder of the Reggio Emilia Approach, from 1970 until his death in 1994 in the municipal infant toddler and preschool system of Reggio Emilia, where she was the first pedagogical coordinator.

Jane Bertrand is currently the Program Director at the Margaret and Wallace McCain Family Foundation. The Foundation’s focus is on early childhood practices, policies and research in Canada. It promotes demonstration sites in partnership with provincial governments in Atlantic Canada; policy research including the tri-annual Early Childhood Education Report systematic review of provincial and territorial developments; and related communication initiatives.

Jane worked in close collaboration with Dr. Fraser Mustard and the Honourable Margaret Norrie McCain over the past 15 years in promoting the early years agenda in Canada and internationally and was the research coordinator for Early Years Study (1999), Early Years Study 2 (2007) and Early Years Study 3 (2011).

After a long career in the NGO sector, in 1999 Naomi Eisenstadt became the first Director of the Sure Start Unit. The Unit was responsible for delivering the government’s commitment to free nursery education places for all three and four year olds, the national childcare strategy, and programmes aiming to reduce the gap in outcomes between children living in disadvantaged areas and the wider child population.

After Sure Start, Naomi spent 3 years as the Director of the Social Exclusion Task Force working across government to identify and promote policies to address the needs of traditionally excluded groups. Naomi is currently an honorary research fellow at the Department of Education, University of Oxford.

Deb Brennan PhD FASSA is Professor in the Social Policy Research Centre (SPRC), University of New South Wales and adjunct Professor in the Centre for Children and Young People (CCYP), Southern Cross University. Deb is one of Australia’s leading researchers on the history and politics of early childhood education and care, family policy and gender and politics.

Her work on the financing of early childhood education and care was widely cited by the Productivity Commission in its inquiry into Child Care and Early Childhood Learning. She is the author of The Politics of Australian Child Care (Cambridge University Press, 1998) and co-editor with Louise Chappell of ‘No Fit Place for Women’. Women in New South Wales Politics, 1856 - 2006 (UNSW Press, 2006) as well as numerous scholarly articles on gender, politics and family policy.
